Message from Rt Hon Ed Miliband MP

The contribution of the British Sikh community in all aspects of public life here in the UK is second to none. British Sikhs play an essential part in modern day British life, and are a core group who enrich our multicultural society. I am proud of our British Sikh population, who are successful across all sectors including arts and media to business, health and the economy.

The values that Sikhs represent of equality, protecting our most vulnerable and upholding a strong community through charity work are values shared by the Labour Party. These values embody my vision of a One Nation Britain, a Britain where everyone can thrive, not just those few at the top.

I think the 'Sikh Manifesto 2015 - 2020', written by Sikh Federation UK demonstrates the commitment of British Sikh's to be actively involved with the political process, and is a great way of empowering the British Sikh community.

I am proud to be the Leader of the Labour Party, who enshrined freedom of religion into British law. As Prime Minister, I can commit to British Sikh's today that I will continue to ensure that people of all faiths are able to practice their religion freely in Britain.
